

2020 DRIVERS FIRST GROUP TEST
20 NEW BIG DOGS HEAD-TO-HEAD + FULL DATA + OUR TOP PICKS

Today's

BRITAIN'S BIGGEST
SELLING GOLF MAGAZINE

GOLF

SPECIAL FOLD-OUT COVER

LEARN FROM THE WORLD'S BEST DRIVERS

HIT YOUR DRIVER

LONGER

WITH HELP FROM RORY,
RAHM, DJ, TIGER,
DAY & WOLFF

ALL THE NEW...

PUTTERS

Trust us, you've never seen anything like Truss

BALLS

From TaylorMade,
Callaway and Srixon

IRONS

First look at Ping's G710s

101

BEST UK STAY AND PLAYS... FROM £65

APRIL 2020 ISSUE 397 FEB 13-MAR 11 £4.99

SORE BACK? THERE IS A WAY YOU CAN SWING PAIN-FREE

TURN TO BACK TO FOLD COVER OUT

How does this compare to your back garden?

This is what we'd do if our Lottery numbers came up

If money was no object, every golfer's back garden would probably look something like this. Designed to function as a short game golf facility in the day and a golf lounge at night, this unique complex cost around $500,000 to build in the grounds of a private estate in New Mexico City.

"I think my client had a regular putting and chipping green in mind, but I don't do regular things," says architect Agustin Piza.

The garden, which covers more than 53,000sqft, features a floodlit putting green with seven tee boxes, multiple flag positions and enough space to hit pitch shots from up to 80 yards. At the heart of the construction is a fire pit which sits in the middle of the complex, inside a giant pot bunker.

"During the day you can practise all types of shots," adds Piza.

"Flops, bump and runs, lag putts. Anything you want to create, it's there. It is a multi-purpose area – during the day the family can enjoy either practising golf or playing in the sandbox. In the evenings, you turn on the music, turn on the lights, turn on the firepit and just relax."

Amazingly, the entire facility took just three months to build and has been finished before the house has even been built. Nice to hear the owner has their priorities right!

Features: Agustin Piza

